A decision of much importance be cause of the position that is taken is that which has been handed down by the federal court at Memphis, Tenn. relative to the Harrison drug act, wherein the judge maintains that it is the drug peddlers and sellers, rather than the unfortunate victims who should pay the full penalty.

It must be recognized that if there is going to be a stop put to the sale habit-forming drugs, that it is of habit-forming drugs, that it is to about nine million dollars, which necessary to do something more than has been collected from the people arrested and fined or sent to a hos- of meeting a tax which is not legal pital, but unless their detention re- and which will not be collected. YALE'S ATHLETIC STANDARD.

Appeals have been made to Yale by athletic authorities of Harvard and Princeton for the reinstatement of LeGore and the other athletes who have been barred from future participation in that college's sports because of the breaking of the rules concerning professionalism

It is recognized by these institutions that the disbarring of these men amounts to the crippling of the Yale team, a fact which is thoroughly understood by Yale, and it is apparent that the appeals come for the purpose of eliminating any onesidedness which is likely to result because thereof in the big football games which are yet the big football games which are yet to be played. Yale's weakness doesn't the task of convincing Germany. need to be pointed out and even though it might not present a championship team with those men reinstated, it would nevertheless be a representative aggregation.

Just how Yale can comply with the requests, if it is inclined to, is diffiunderstand since the action which it has taken has been for the purpose of maintaining a standard in athletics and that cannot mean one thing now and something else at another time, if it is going to amount to anything. Just because the disbarring of players cripples a team ought not to be used as an argument for overlooking the penalty in one case and applying it in another. If It is going to amount to anything all must be treated alike, else there is no standard and those who are the star players will feel at liberty to break the rules where the less important player is called strictly to Yale cannot consistently reinstate the men and look upon its action as proper discipline.
